A GRANT STATUE.

The Squire Bill for a $300,000 Equestrian Figure.

FAVORABLE REPORT IS MADE

Senator Squire Tells what His Hope is in Regard to It-A Great Memorial-A Beautiful Design Design and Competition Open to the Artists of the World. Americans Preferred.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 30.-It ems strange that this city of all other American cities should be without at appropriate memorial to General Grant whose name is inseparably associated whose name is inseparably associated with the city as the capital of the nation to save which he contributed so largely. This thought has come into the minds of many legislators of late, especially with reference to the birthday of General Grant, which was celebrated Monday. It is therefore, held to be quite appropriate that on that day Senator Squire should report to the senate favorubly from the committee on public buildings and grounds the bill which was introduced by him last December, providing for the erection of a monument to General Grant in this city. This bill directs that the secretary of war, the chalrman of the joint committee on the library, and the architect of the capitol, shall contract for and locate an equestring statue in bronze pf General Ulysses S. Grant, to be erected on ground belonging to the United States in this city, and to pay the on-tire expense of thes tatue, the pedestal and the preparation of the site the sum of $300,000 is appropriated. Senator Squire said to a Star eporter this afternoon that for three or four years post he has introduced bills similar to this in the hope of getting the nation to erect at its capital city a memorial to one of the greatest of American soldiers.

"It has been a great disappointment to me," he said, "that this, proposition with the city as the capital of the na-

"It has been a great disappointment to me," he said, "that this proposition has been neglected and the expenditure to me." he said, "that this proposition has been peglected and the expenditure postponed for one excuse and mother, mainly, however, on account of the alleged state of finances. I can conceive of no more patriotic thing that Congress could do, and no more appropriate act than to pass such a bill and to provide for the erection of this statue in this city. The time has surely elapsed necessary to give to General Grant's fame that perspective that entitles it to everlasting commemmentation in substantial form and to my mind the only question in this connection is as to the proper form and character of the memorial which the nation should erect. It should be a great thing, not a mere passing monument or some utilitarian project that does not comport with the true sentiment that should attach to such an enterprise. In some cases it is well to commemmente fame by practical objects of every day use, such as buildings and bridges, which are called by the names of the men who are to be thus immortalized, but in the case of Grant I doubt if such is the proper course to pursue. In foreign capitals both kinds of commemmentation art are to be found, and in almost every instance the examples are all beautiful. It has been suggested in this case that the memorial bridge, for which the senate thas already passed a bill, would be the proper meditin of expressing this grand sentiment on the part of the people. But I take a different view, and in the bill which I have prepared I have broken away from idea and have suggested in the proper spirit, and with sufficient breadth of treatment will give ample room for expressing the sentiment of the nation.

To be Equestrian.

To be Equestrian "It has been said that public commemmoration art in Washington has run too much to the equestrian statue run too much to the equestrian statue idea, and that future monuments of this character should depart from this rule. I, however, favor the equestrian statue. In the case of a man of military fame such as General Grant the equestrian statue is most appropriate and that form of expression has been found to be far more striking than other forms. For example, the peace monument at the foot of the capito. Somehow or other that monument falls to strike the mind with the force that its sentiment suggests. While in itself per-how or other that monument fails to strike the mind with the force that its sentiment suggests. While in itself perhaps a beautiful thing, it foes not strongly embody the principle that it represents—the principle of peace bought by bloodshed.

"At the same time I think it would be well to depart somewhat from the plain statue like a that is exemplified in the Hancock memorial about to be unveiled, where the simplicity of the pedestal and surroundings gives to the statue purely and simply the character of a representation of a man on horseback, however beautiful and artistic the bronze itself may be. In this connection I noted with pleasure the beautiful designs that were submitted for the Sherman statue. In some of those designs the pedestal plans were exceptionally beautiful, and perhaps it is in that respect that I would prefer to see this memorial excel.

"I would like to see the competition open to the artists of the world. I would prefer to focurse, that the memorial should be the work of an American; but in a case like this the nation should have the beat, the very beat that can be obtained. The finest talent that the world can afford should be summoned.

have the best, the very best that can be obtained. The finest talent that the world can afford should be summoned to suggest plans and ideas for this great work, which, if undertaken, must be carried out on generous national Illustrative of Characteristics.

"I have in mind no especial site for the memorial. My bill contemplates Thave in mind no especial site for the memorial. My bill contemplates that it shall be located on public ground, and it was for that reason that the measure was referred to the committee on public buildings and grounds, although in some senses it properly beinged to the committee on library. The memorial should be placed where, it can be readily seen from a distance and amid surroundings that will harmonize with its character. The entire effect should be symbolic of the life, character and work of General Grant. I have in mind two great memorials of this nature, one the Nelson moniment in London, and the other the Hotel des Invalides in Paris, the former commemorating the fame of England's greatest naval commander and the latter marking the last resting place of the great Napoleon. In each of these the surroundings and the memorial itself are characteristic of the memorial itself are characteristic of the man and the events commenmorated. It the case of the tomb of Napoleon there is the inference of the Nelson memorial in London the effect is different, just as the life and circumstances of the man commenmorated were different. In these two great works of art the central thought seems to have been to preserve characteristics, and this I would have done in the Grant memorial which my bill proposes.

"I cannot say, of course, as to the prospects of passing this measure, Every year I have hoped to secure action upon it, and while the opportunity for legislation this year seems schoole, yet there is a chance that before the session is over sufficient attention may be attracted to the proposition to cause the reembers of Congress to agree to enact this long-delayed proposition. In the country, to the end in a short time this national memorial, to one of Americal's greatest soms, may become an architect reality.

A number of influential foreign houses stated positively that they had no intention to ship gold this week. The course of stock prices was dictated by the professionals, and while irregularity was noted, the more general tendency was toward a lower level, the intense duliness at intervals encouraging attacks by the bear leaders. The Industrials were prominent in the trading, and also covered the widest range in liquidations. The pressure against the market was most pronounced in the trading in the early afternoon, but in the closing dealings, the expectation of smaller gold shipments than had been prefigured upon, led to a rully, in which Sugar figured for 1½ per cent. The closing was steady at the raily. The net changes recorded slight losses.
